

Catalogues

You are organising a party at your house but you suddenly realise that you need a few items.

The only things you have got at the moment are:

- A plentiful supply of alcoholic drinks
- More than enough food

Unfortunately last night you were burgled and they have taken all the electrical goods in your house. You decide you are going to have the party come what may.

Three of your friends have lent you £1500 until you get something from you insurance company.

- Make a list of items you feel you will need to buy. Use the catalogues or the internet to help you.
- Work out the total cost and how much you will have left from the £1500.
- Draw up a letter to your insurance company telling them how much you have spent and asking for the money. You have to pay the first £100 yourself.
- Finally you need to give any money leftover back to your friends before the party.

Have fun!
