Fabio Capello has given England winning mentality, says Steven Gerrard

Steven Gerrard's confident of England's chances in Group C.

Steven Gerrard has revealed the "winning mentality" instilled into England's players by Fabio Capello during his two and a half years in charge. Capello took over a side out of sorts after they'd failed to qualify for the 2008 European Championships in Austria and Switzerland. Under the Italian's leadership, though, England has topped its group in World Cup qualifying.

Gerrard said: "From when the manager first took over, there's been a change. I think every player's gone on record to say that it was a tough time to play for England a few years ago as there was pressure. The manager has given us a winning mentality and confidence." Gerrard's views are certainly shared by other members of the team.

Gerrard, who celebrated his 30th birthday on Sunday, is refusing to look too far ahead but is confident England can top their group in South Africa. He said: "I think we can get out of the group as winners and then we take the last-16 challenges on. I don't really want to look any further ahead but we have a good mix of experience and fresh talented youngsters. I think it'll be the youngsters' skills that will carry us through."

Gerrard, Capello and the remainder of the England squad flew into South Africa this morning. In nine days' time they'll play their group opener with the USA.
